

The Silk Road

In ancient times, the Silk Road was more than a trade route-it was a tapestry of stories. One such tale is of Liang, a kind young man from Xi'an, who inherited a chest of rare, mystical tea leaves from his merchant father. These leaves were said to grant wisdom and guide the worthy toward their destiny.

As the sun set, Liang opened the chest, the magical aroma filling the room. He felt a surge of excitement and knew his life was about to change. Inspired, Liang set off on the Silk Road, seeking not fortune, but the world's mysteries. His journey became a legend-one of transformation, magic, and the pursuit of deeper truths.

"Gift of Destiny"

As the sun set, casting a golden glow, Liang opened the chest. A magical scent of tea filled the room, stirring something deep inside him. It was as if the ancient leaves whispered of adventures beyond the horizon. Liang knew then—he would journey along the Silk Road, not just for fortune, but to uncover the world's mysteries.

Rodzi Tea Punch

Zacapa 23, Pineapple, Mango, Matcha tea, Sage

90 AED

The Rodzi Tea Punch cocktail is named after the path leading to the House of Tea Ceremonies in Japan and is served in a Tibetan monks' cup used for meditative tea drinking. It is based on the subtle astringency of tea, aged rum and pineapple, creating a harmony of flavors. This drink is dedicated to the hero whose inspiration is tea, which collected all the treasures of the Silk Road.

"Mystery Coins"

In a quiet desert town, Liang traded a bit of his magical tea with an old man for a chest of gold coins. The coins were said to be cursed, bringing fortune or misfortune based on the owner's heart. Curious yet cautious, Liang accepted, knowing this was only the beginning of his Silk Road adventures.

Hurasu Sour

Pisco, Strawberry Soju, Passion Fruit, Sage

The cocktail "Hurasu Sour" takes its name from ancient Babylonian gold coins, symbols of wealth of that time. This sweet and sour drink based on pisco with notes of strawberry and a sage aftertaste is served in a chest with gold coins and garnished with a chocolate coin. Every detail recalls the luxury and treasures of ancient times.

“The Silk of Fate”

In Samarkand’s bustling bazaar, Liang traded gold coins for a silk so fine it shimmered like dew. It was said to carry the dreams of the wearer. That night, wrapped in the silk, Liang dreamt of distant lands and hidden secrets, as if the fabric held ancient wisdom guiding his journey.

Silk Fizz

75 AED

Tanqueray 10, Malibu, Calamansi, Pineapple, Vanilla, Cream, Soda water

The Silk Fizz cocktail is a sophisticated combination of gin with delicate notes of calamansi, pineapple and vanilla, creating a light, airy texture. Its texture is reminiscent of silk garments, softly enveloping the senses. This cocktail symbolizes silk, the first treasure of the East, which conquered the entire continent on its way from East to West.

“Gift of the Sea”

In Hormuz, a pearl diver gifted Liang a string of enchanted pearls, said to be from a sea where mermaids whispered secrets. Liang treasured them, and their glow guided him, helping him navigate the perils of his journey.

This light and fresh cocktail based on flavored wine combines feijoa and milky oolong tea, creating a sparkling and sophisticated composition. It is like the final chord of a journey filled with the spirit of Europe and aromas of exoticism.

Thus, Liang finished his long journey, changed not just by the knowledge he gained but by a deep wisdom that enriched his soul. He didn't return home with chests full of gold or jewels, but with stories that were more valuable than any treasure. Each story, each encounter along the way, became a living legend-full of secrets, lessons, and magic, carried across deserts, mountains, and the lively markets of ancient cities.

His journey wasn't just about trade; it was a spiritual path of growth, learning, and uncovering the world's hidden truths. Every exchange, whether it was for precious gems or simple feathers, brought him closer to understanding the deeper meaning of each adventure. The real magic wasn't just in the things he found, but in the people who shared pieces of their lives with him.

Every step through the desert's hot sands or the rocky mountain trails sparked new awareness in Liang-teaching him more about himself, his strength, and his place in the world. His journey became a symbol of endless searching, where the greatest treasures weren't outside, but within.
